Chapter 1 by Story Wars

Death is inevitable. For some it scares and for others it's satisfactory but it still rings in everyone's mind, even in the back that they're gonna die. Some people think that for them it means live life to the fullest how you want not having a care in the world and for others it means to just get by till well, you die.

For me, it just means, depending on how I'm going to die whether it's not being able to follow through with my heart transplant, or something totally different, I have to eat healthy. I mean, I don't want to, at all but, I want to be healthy so my new heart can cooperate with the rest of my body.

Besides the fact about me having a fraction of my life worried that I could die over millions of things and what has to happen and why I have to eat good and this and that and this and that 'cause I can honestly go on and on and on about it. But even if you don't have some problem with your heart or some other benefit of the doubt the government gives every child a check for it, kids also should just eat well in their childhood because when you get older, the of could get some issue in your health that involves you not eating right as a kid or from not eating enough and even too much food can cause problems.

Still besides the point food is food and kids should eat healthy not just so you wouldn't have problems in or outside of your body. You also need to eat food so that you can be provided equally in nutrition and health. Kids with diagnosed problems and non diagnosed problems.
